The State of Georgia has adopted, as State Law, the 2018 International Residential Code and the 2015 International Energy Conservation Code along with Ga Amendments. These codes regulate the design and installation of the HVAC system, and building energy efficiency. The designer/builder/contractor shall comply with the standards of this code, which are applicable.

These codes contain requirements for building tightness and the design and installation of whole-house mechanical ventilation systems, and became mandatory on January 1, 2020. Compliance with this code by designers, contractors, and builders is mandatory.
